

Gerard E. Mullin, MD

Surprising solutions to Inflammatory Bowel Disease

Disclosure Statement:

Gerard Mullin, MD has indicated he does not have financial relationships with any commercial interests.

About the lecture:

The lecture will discuss the pathophysiology of irritable bowel disease. A review of nutraceutical and dietary options will be presented.

About Dr. Mullin:

Dr. Mullin is associate professor of medicine, director of integrative GI nutrition services and director of capsule endoscopy for the gastroenterology division at the Johns Hopkins Hospital. Dr. Mullin graduated from the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey-New Jersey Medical School, completed his training in internal medicine at the Mount Sinai Hospital, and conducted his fellowship in Gastroenterology, Hepatology and Nutrition at the Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Dr. Mullin focuses his clinical practice on integrative gastrointestinal nutrition and functional gastrointestinal disorders. Dr. Mullin also specializes in capsule endoscopy.

Contacting Dr. Mullin:

600 N. Wolfe Street
Carnegie 464B
Baltimore, MD 21287

410.502.4270 – Office
410.502.4478 – Fax

gmillin1@jhmi.edu